Concentration in Lieu of Core Courses
Proposal

Proposals should be prepared in accordance with the policy passed by the Department at its meeting in September 1987. Specifically, proposals should incorporate, in one to three pages, the followings:

- A statement of justification for the specific three courses you propose in lieu of the core courses. State how these three courses differ from your own area of specialization and how each course relates to the others to form a cohesive concentration.

- A demonstration of breadth in psychology beyond your area of specialization. The specific courses you have taken or plan to take (in addition to the three proposed for the concentration) that demonstrate such breadth should be listed, and a rationale presented as to why such courses demonstrate breadth in psychology should be included.

- A copy of your undergraduate and graduate transcripts.
